

WANT REICHMANN TO TESTIFY

CARNEGIE EX-PRESIDENT MAY PICK OUT ROBIN'S STORY.

Grand Jury Subpoenas for Bradley Martin, Jr., John V. Coggey and Madison Trust Directors—A "Dummy" Loan to Get Robin's Name Out of Sight.

The District Attorney hopes to get from Joseph B. Reichmann, who was once president of the Carnegie Trust Company, a complete history of the loans made to various institutions and individuals by the Carnegie concern. From Mr. Reichmann the District Attorney hopes also to obtain explanations as to why William J. Cummins was able to borrow from a number of city depositories for the Carnegie Trust Company or for himself or for persons and concerns in which he was interested large sums immediately after city cash was deposited in these banks.

Joseph G. Robin, who has told the District Attorney a great deal about the queer maneuvering of the Carnegie Trust Company, has touched upon these matters in the talks he has had with Mr. Whitman and with Assistant District Attorney Clark, who is assisting in the preparation of evidence to be submitted to the Grand Jury to-morrow afternoon; but there have been a good many breaks in Robin's disclosures and it is thought that Mr. Reichmann will be willing to supply connections.

The former president of the Carnegie Trust Company, who was put in office by the Cummins syndicate, is now in Dayton, Ohio, working to rehabilitate the Platt Iron Works, a valuable concern in which Mr. Cummins and his associates succeeded in interesting Andrew Carnegie. Before he went to Dayton Mr. Reichmann had a talk with the District Attorney. He was not ready then to make such explanations as the District Attorney thought the situation demanded, and he was told to think things over. There is a pretty strong belief around the District Attorney's office that when Mr. Reichmann returns he will go to see Mr. Whitman again.

Persons who have discussed the responsibility for the wrecking of the trust company speak more kindly of Reichmann than of others connected with the recent management of the concern. Royal Victor of Sullivan & Cromwell, the law firm which is representing the creditors of the Dayton iron works and the Nashville packing company, concerns that became involved because of the operations of the Cummins syndicate, said yesterday that Reichmann may have been deceived by his associates, but that it was improbable he could have knowingly had a hand in illegitimate operations.

Subpoenas were issued yesterday for all the men who were directors of the Madison Trust Company at the time the Carnegie Trust Company broke and for John V. Coggey, a director of the Nineteenth Ward Bank, and Bradley Martin, Jr., president of the Nineteenth Ward Bank and a director in the string of Van Norden banking concerns in which the Carnegie Trust Company bought stock. Mr. Coggey was formerly Commissioner of Charities and Corrections and is a Tammany district leader. The Madison Trust Company, the Nineteenth Ward Bank and the Twelfth Ward Bank loaned heavily to the Cummins management of the Carnegie company and the city was a co-signer in all three institutions. It was surmised yesterday that Mr. Whitman wants to learn among other things if any relation existed between the loans to the Carnegie Trust Company and the Carnegie Trust Company and the Carnegie Trust Company and the Carnegie Trust Company.

Among the transactions which the District Attorney will submit to the Grand Jury was a loan or series of loans made in the summer of 1910 by the Carnegie Trust Company to William Ferguson, the whole amounting to $250,000. Mr. Ferguson was at that time clerk in the office of Keener & Lewis, of which Judge William A. Keener was the senior partner and Lister L. Lewis the junior. Mr. Lewis was also the counsel for the Carnegie Trust Company and a director of the company. The Grand Jury will receive on Monday evidence concerning the part he played in the financial operations of the Cummins crowd.

Joseph G. Robin, then president of the Northern Bank, was the indorser of the renewal note made out to the law firm and of the three notes made out to somebody whose name hasn't appeared. The collateral on which the $250,000 was secured was stock in various traction and industrial companies in which Robin was involved. The records show that three notes were drawn in the summer of 1910 and that the three were renewed on December 29, 1910, in the form of a large demand note for $250,000 after the failure of the Robin Northern Bank.

The first of the notes which appears in the inventory of the assets of the Carnegie Trust Company prepared by the State Banking Department bears the date of June 23, 1910, and is for $50,000. Robin was the indorser, and the security was stock in the Robin Northern Bank. Four thousand dollars in first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds of the South Shore Traction Company, 100 shares of the Northern Bank, 300 shares of the Fidelity Development Company preferred stock.

The second note, for $25,000, was dated July 1, 1910, and was secured by Robin with the following collateral: Twenty thousand dollars in South Shore Traction Company 5 per cent. bonds, 50 shares of the Northern Bank and 200 shares of the Fidelity Development Company preferred stock.

On August 10, 1910, the third note indorsed by Robin was issued. It was for $150,000 and the securities were $150,000 in South Shore Traction Company first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, 400 shares of the Northern Bank and 4,000 shares Fidelity Development Company preferred stock.

Ferguson, who is now head clerk for Keener & Lewis & Wickes of 5 Nassau street, the firm that Lister L. Lewis went to after his break with Judge Keener, talked freely yesterday about these notes and how they came to be drawn in his name. He said he didn't think there was anything wrong in doing what they asked. They told me that the run on the company would be stopped, that the note would be taken up in a couple of days and that it was a mere bookkeeping device to protect the depositors. My name did not appear on any of the other notes, but on the renewal note only, and I have been in a formal proceeding, as I have explained.

Lister L. Lewis denied himself to reporters yesterday. An associate of Judge Keener said that there had been no contact between Judge Keener and Lewis because of the note transaction in which Ferguson was used. Judge Chamberlain Hyde said yesterday that there was no truth in a story that Joseph B. Reichmann contributed through him $25,000 to Mayor Gaynor's campaign. Mr. Hyde said he did not become acquainted with Reichmann until after Mayor Gaynor had taken office. A judgment for $2,021 obtained in the Supreme Court by default was entered against the Carnegie Trust Company. Joseph B. Reichmann and Martin

BLOOMINGDALES, Lex. to 3d Ave., 59th to 60th St.

J. Condon, directors of the Carnegie Trust Company, in favor of James S. Watson.

The judgment was on four demand notes dated August 25, 1910, of $20,000 each, made by Reichmann, Condon, Charles A. Moore, Jr., and William J. Cummins, and guaranteed by them to the order of the Hungarian American Bank, which was transferred to Mr. Watson. Attached to the notes was collateral security consisting of 200 shares of stock of Manning, Maxwell & Moore, notes of the Platt Iron Works Company, $40,000, and a note of the Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company, $20,000.

Reichmann, Moore, Cummins and Condon are four of the six "guarantors" on the deposit of $650,000 which the city had in the Carnegie Trust Company which the company was closed and on which it will get back 15 per cent., or $97,500, when the first dividend to depositors is paid.

ALBANY, March 11.—Prof. Charles A. Collin, who took the note for Gov. Dix to District Attorney Whitman on Tuesday last which caused a great deal of criticism because it passed through the hands of Stephen C. Baldwin, attorney for Director W. J. Cummins of the Carnegie Trust Company, before it reached Mr. Whitman, returned to Albany to-day.

Gov. Dix as soon as he returned to Albany will make a personal statement to the Governor, which I think is due him. Collin refused to talk, intimating that if the word he should bring the Governor was to be made public it would be given out by the Governor.

CANTEN OVER BRITISH PORTS.

Government Stops Aeroplane Feats by Mars at Hongkong.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—A report is brought here by the steamship Mongolia from the Orient that Aviator J. C. Mars was prohibited by the British authorities from making flights at Hongkong. The British Government has strict regulations against the use of aeroplanes within the sight of fortifications. Mars left here in January and gave exhibitions in Honolulu. It is said that he planned to make Hongkong the scene of his most ambitious work on the present tour.
